

Equipping corporations with reliable insights on air spend

ARC's Air Program Monitor is an easy-to-use analytical tool that provides travel managers with a high-level review of their air travel spend metrics to effectively measure program performance and prepare for airline business reviews.

How can Air Program Monitor enhance my airline reviews?

Evaluate contract effectiveness

With insight into your market share by airline and route, along with average ticket price benchmarks, you have the data insight you need to measure performance and validate contract metrics.

Enhance supplier strategy

Greater visibility into airline program key performance indicators (KPIs), along with market share analysis by spend and passenger count, enables more strategic conversations about performance and growth.

Streamline airline meeting preparation

Simplified analytics, accessible any time and aligned with airline reports, allow you to proactively and confidently prepare for your quarterly airline contract reviews.

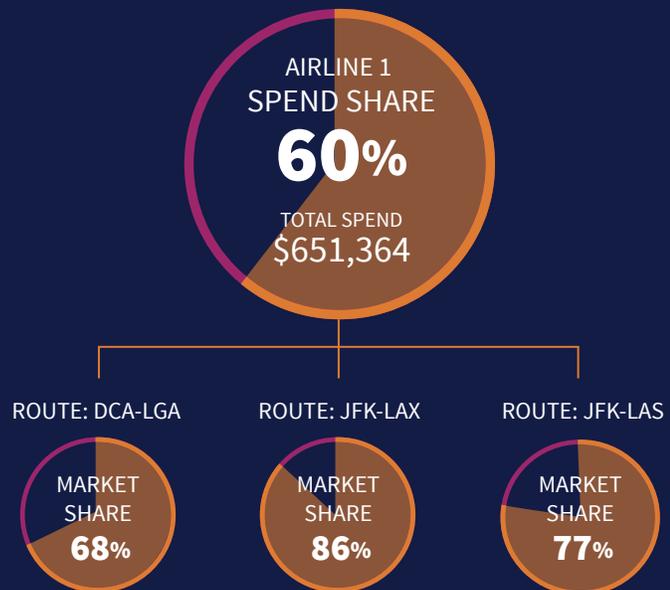

Uncover potential cost savings

Transparency into corporate market and corporate peer group averages, as well as share gap analysis, gives you more precise comparisons for identifying savings opportunities.

Understand market share by airline and O&D

View actionable performance data, including market share by total spend and passenger count, to proactively prepare for airline conversations.
